A representative from DTE Energy will provide an update on the utility's energy rebate program at the Sept. 11 meeting of the Southeast Chapter of the Association of Energy Engineers. The Energy Efficiency Program for Business offers cash incentives for projects that increase energy efficiency while lowering energy costs. In addition to earning rebates, the installation of new equipment also will accelerate the simple payback period on the investment – to as little as a single year.

Besides a quick overview of the program, the DTE Energy representative also will show ways that companies can employ out-of-the-box thinking to create custom applications that fall outside the program's defined incentives.

The cash incentives offered under the DTE Energy program include both electric and natural gas improvements, upgrades, replacements and enhancements to existing equipment.
